The majority of Minnesotans believe the University isn’t getting enough funding from the state.

Q6: Currently the University receives the same level of funding from the State of Minnesota as it did in 2000. Since 2000, student enrollment has increased 13 percent. After hearing the statement above, would you say that the University receives too much, not enough or just the right amount of funding from the state?

One fourth of Minnesotans believe the University should be funded mostly with state taxes. Half of Minnesotans feel the University should be funded with equal amounts from the state and tuition.

Q4: Education at the University of Minnesota is mostly paid by two sources: state taxes and student tuition. What do you think the balance between these two sources should be? Should education at the University of Minnesota be funded:

Source: 2014 Public Perception and Attitude Survey, conducted by PadillaCRT. 1,335 adults surveyed. This sample represents the opinions of Minnesotans statewide. The margin of error for this study is +/- 2.68% at a 95% confidence level.